PREFACE

WHEN, between fifteen and twenty years ago, I first saw the list of works containing some reference to the phallic cultus which was printed at the end of the anonymously written Cultus Arborum, I was so struck by its entire inadequacy that then and there the germ of this present work came into being. The task of searching out further references developed into an undertaking of considerable magnitude, proof of which is to be found in the 9,000 items in this bibliography. That it is complete is, of course, not to be expected, but the writer trusts that the material presented may (by means of the index) be of use to anthropologists and others desirous of information concerning the sexual ideas and customs of savage and civilized peoples. The part played by the phallic idea in various religions has been found to be very considerable, even when the various absurd "Arkite" and other theories of the last century have been heavily discounted. Modern discoveries have placed that beyond cavil.

The writer craves indulgence for any unevenness which may be found in the work and which was inevitable in such a mass of material collected over so long a period of time. Errors there must also be, for perfection is not a human attribute, but it is hoped that they are neither so numerous nor so important as seriously to detract from the usefulness of the work. It will be noticed that pains have been taken to supply the full names and the years of birth and death of the authors, and in this connection it may be mentioned that considerable assistance has been rendered by various delegates of the Universal Esperanto Association, of Geneva. It may be invidious, perhaps, to single out one name from among the many persons who have given me assistance, but I cannot forbear to mention the kindness of Mr. Alfred Ela, of Boston, Massachusetts, in so freely giving me access to his store of notes on various esoteric subjects. Thanks are also due to the Harvard University Library, in whose "stacks" I spent so many pleasant hours, the Boston Public Library, the Boston Medical Library, the Boston Athenæum, and the staff of the Reading Room of the British Museum, who, from the Superintendent to the youngest assistant, have been so uniformly courteous. I regret that it is not possible to say the same of the Bibliothèque Nationale at Paris, but my experience there forbids it.

Finally, I should like to pay a tribute to the printers, whose task has not been an easy one. Having practised the "art preservative" myself in Manitoba many years ago, I can testify to the great care taken in dealing with the many titles in foreign languages.

ROGER GOODLAND.

COLLIER, Rt. Rev. Jeremy, M.A., Non-juring Bishop, 1650-1726.—The Great historical, geographical, genealogical, and poetical Dictionary; being a curious miscellany of sacred and profane history. Containing, in short, the lives and most remarkable actions of the patriarchs, judges, and kings of the Jews; of the apostles, fathers, and doctors of the Church; of popes, cardinals, bishops, &c. Of heresiarchs and schismaticks, with an account of their principal doctrines; of emperors, kings, illustrious princes, and great generals; of ancient and modern authors; of philosophers, inventors of arts, and all those who have recommended themselves to the world, by their valour, virtue, learning or some notable circumstances of their lives. Together with the establishment and progress both of religious and military orders, and the lives of their founders. As also, the fabulous history of the heathen gods and heroes. The description of empires, kingdoms, commonwealths, provinces, cities, towns, islands, mountains, rivers, and other considerable places, both of ancient and modern geography; wherein is observed the situation, extent and quality of the country; the religion, government, morals and customs of the inhabitants; the sects of Christians, Jews, heathens, and Mahometans. The principal terms of arts and sciences; the publick and solemn actions, as festivals, plays, &c. The statutes and laws; and withal, the history of general and particular Councils, under the names of the places where they have been celebrated. The whole being full of remarks and curious enquiries, for the illustration of several difficulties in theology, history, chronology, and geography. Collected from the best historians, chronologers, and lexicographers; as Calvisius, Helvicus, Isaacson, Marsham, Baudrand, Hoffman, Lloyd, Chevreau, and others: but more especially out of Lewis Morery, D.D., his eighth edition corrected and enlarged by Monsieur Le Clerc; in two volumes in folio. To which are added, by way of supplement, intermix'd throughout the alphabet, the lives, most remarkable actions, and writings of several illustrious families of our English, Scotch, and Irish nobility, and gentry, and most famous men of all professions, arts, and sciences; as also, an exact description of these kingdoms; with the most considerable occurrences that have happened to this present time. The second edition, revis'd, corrected, and enlarg'd to the year 1688. London. Printed for Henry Rhodes, near Bride-Lane, in Fleetstreet; Thomas Newborough, at the Golden Ball in St. Paul's Church-Yard; the assigns of L. Meredith, at the Star in St. Paul's Church-Yard; and Elizabeth Harris, at the Harrow in Little-Britain. 1701. 2 v. Frontis. (portr. of author). F. Vol. i, s.vv. Baptes, Eleusis; vol. ii, s.vv. HURD, Rev. Dr. William.—A New universal history of religious rites, ceremonies, and customs of the whole world: or, a complete and impartial view of all the religions in the various nations of the universe. Both antient and modern, from the Creation down to the present time. Containing, besides many other curious, instructive and entertaining particulars, a full and authentic account of the rise and progress, including the antient and present state of religion amongst the Jews, Egyptians, Carthaginians, Druids, Bramins, Assyrians, Babylonians, Medes, Persians, Chinese, Japanese, Africans, and all the other idolatrous and pagan nations, Mahometans, Greeks, Christians, Romish Church, with the various orders of her communion, &c., &c. Together with a very particular history of the Protestant or Reformed churches, and of all the sects and denominations in Great-Britain and Ireland, and the Colonies abroad, viz. the Church of England, — Scotland, Lutherans, Moravians, Dissenters, Presbyterians, Calvinists, Arminians, Independents, Baptists, Arians, Socinians, Quakers, Nonjurors, Sandemanians, Antinomians, &c. Comprehending also a genuine and circumstantial description of all the most material lesser sects, parties, heresies, and religious opinions, since the first promulgation of Christianity; and likewise the ecclesiastical laws and history concerning every religion. To which are added the most important transactions of church councils, assemblies, synods, &c., &c. I. An account of those persons by whom the various modes of worship were established, and the means used in propagating them. II. The most satisfactory information concerning their tenets, creeds, sentiments, and doctrines, with respect to religious, moral and civil obligations. III. The causes which promoted their prevalence in the world; the methods taken for their

- support: and the reasons why many of them have sunk into obscurity. IV. Their general consequences and effects in operating on the minds and conduct of men. V. The ceremonies and discipline in their different temples, cathedrals, churches, mosques, sanctuaries, and other places of worship. VI. Their forms, ceremonies, and customs in marriage, birth, funerals, &c. VII. A display of the several sacrifices, and the dresses of the priests and religious orders; with an account of the early attachment of mankind to idolatry. VIII. An exact summary of the different objects of adoration, deities, and idols; times and places of religious observance, fasts and festivals: with a survey of the utensils employed at altars, in divine offices, &c., and whatever else is worthy of notice respecting the origin or present state of every sacred institution. The whole being the result of many years' study, and comprising not only all that is valuable on the subject of religion, but also a variety of new and interesting matter relative to the manners and customs of all nations, not to be found in any other work. Designed to form a complete family library. Including the whole body of divinity, according to the different religious usages in every part of the known world. Calculated for Christians of all denominations; and illustrated by quotations from the most celebrated authors. London. Printed for Alexander Hogg, at No. 16, Paternoster Row. [1788.] iv, (2), 5-703 pp. Pls. Frontis. F. - OWEN, Rev. Dr. Charles, c. 1660-1746.—*An Essay towards a natural history of serpents: in two parts. I. The first exhibits a general view of serpents, in their various aspects; such as their kinds, bulk, food, motion, propagation, coverture, colours. In which is inserted a short account of vegetable, mineral, and animal poison, particularly that of the serpent; and its cure in various nations; where also the serpent is used as food and physick. II. The second gives a view of most serpents that are known in the several parts of the world; described by their various names, different countries, and qualities. Illustrated with copper-plates, engraved by the best hands. III. To which is added a third part; containing six dissertations upon the following articles, as collateral to the subject. 1. Upon the primeval serpent in Paradise. 2. The fiery serpents that infested the camp of Israel. 3. The brazen serpent erected by Moses. 4. The divine worship given to serpents by the nations. 5. The origin and reason of that monstrous worship. 6. Upon the adoration of different kinds of beasts by the Egyptians, with divers instances of the same stupidity in other nations. The whole intermix'd with variety of entertaining digressions, philosophical and historical. London. Printed for the author.
